THE GOOD OLD NEWS

GLORIFIED GUN

For a period of 23 years John Burnett, a special officer for the Rock Island Railroad, carried the same gun, presented to him by a sheriff in 1918. The revolver, a silver plated, Smith and Wesson .44, was decorated with diamonds, rubies, eight $1.00 gold pieces, and contained two etched portraits of the owner as well as his thumb print. Burnett always kept the gun loaded, but never fired it for fear of damaging his valuable gat. (Oklahoma City)

TELLING HIM OFF

Calkins Lee, a young Harvard graduate, first went West when he inherited a Texas Panhandle ranch from his uncle. After a time he noticed that his cattle were disappearing at an alarming rate, and after investigating he became convinced that a neighboring rancher was the thief. Mr. Lee thereupon decided to write the rustler a firm note. In his best English he penned "I shall appreciate it if you will refrain from your careless habit of leaving your hot branding irons in places where my cattle can lie down upon them."

JAIL HOME

The jail at Burnsville, Colorado, was the only lodging that Spec Krueger, a penniless "retired" prospector, had known in a long time. For years he avoided hotel bills by becoming sufficiently disorderly to warrant confinement at the town's expense. In 1895 an Eastern relative died and left Krueger a fortune sufficient for him to spend his remaining years in comfort. He eagerly looked about for an attractive house in which to spend his last years. After a long search, he decided that only one building in Burnsville looked like home to him, and he bought it - the jailhouse.

SAVIOR OF THE FLAMES

Caleb Fuller, an aged bank robber, was waiting in the jail at Silver Springs, California, to be hanged to the nearest cottonwood, for his long life of crime. Just before the hanging, however, the jail caught fire. Fuller was freed as the wall of his cell crumbled in the fierce heat, but instead of fleeing he stayed around and rescued the sheriff and two deputies. In gratitude, the sheriff gave him his horse and a twelve hour start and Fuller was never heard of again.

WATCHES AHOY

Before Kirby Benedict became Supreme Court Justice of New Mexico, in 1853, he was hired, as a criminal lawyer, to defend a happy-go-lucky vagrant accused of stealing two dozen watches from a hotel in Taos. At the trial Benedict's skilled oratory persuaded the jury that his client was not only innocent of theft, but hardly knew a watch when he saw one. The verdict was "not guilty," and the defendant was delighted. "I want to show my appreciation," he said, and passing down the jury box, the grinning hobo presented to each of the twelve men a fine gold turnip time-piece. He was retried and convicted for possession of stolen property.

THE LONG PULL

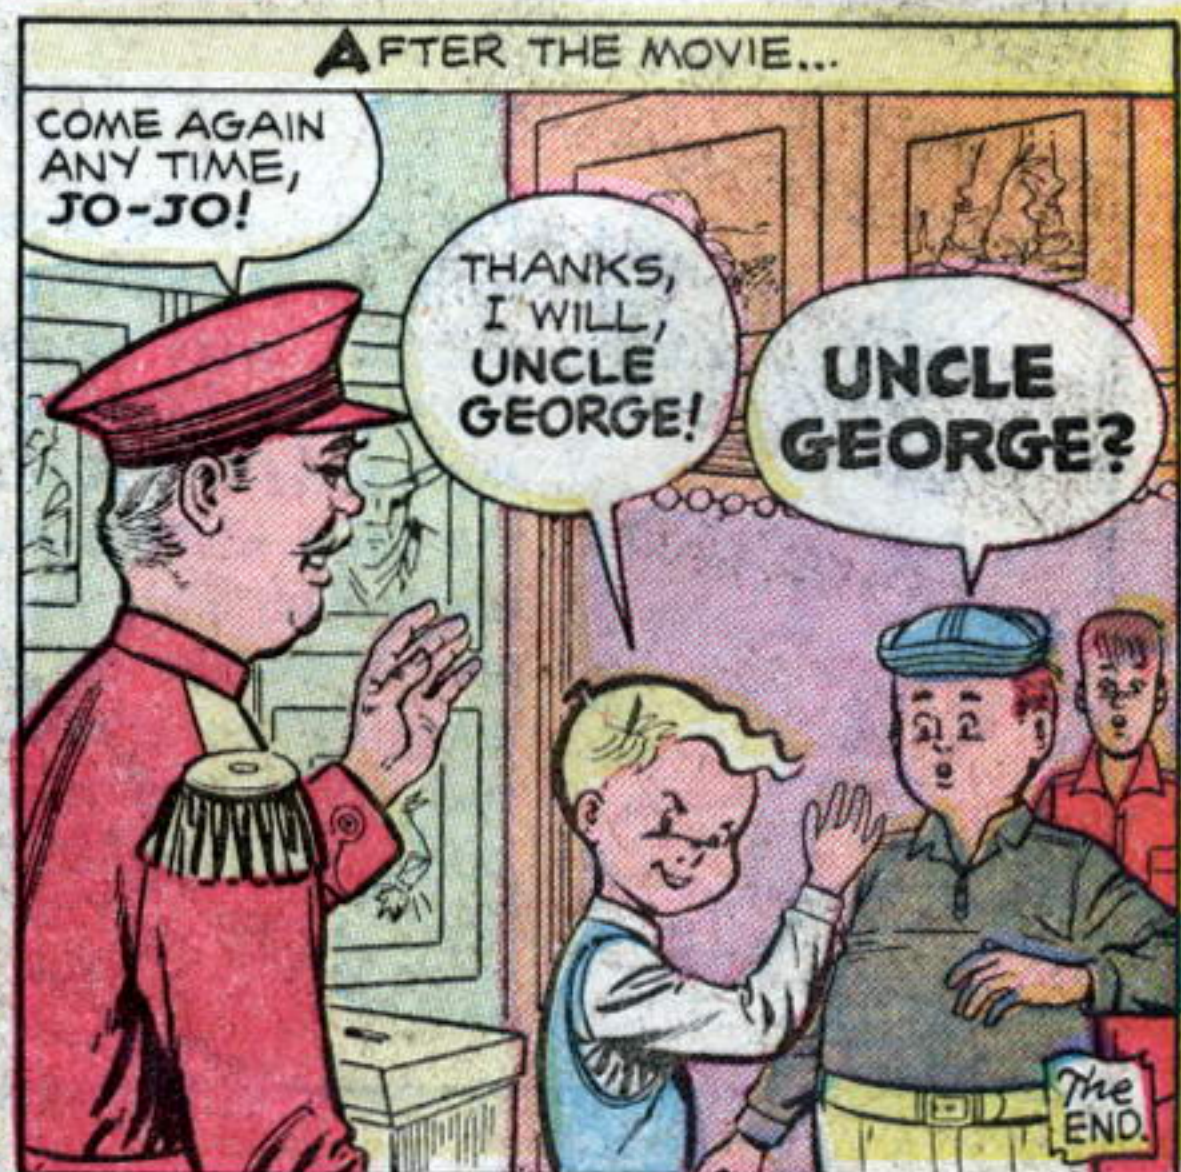

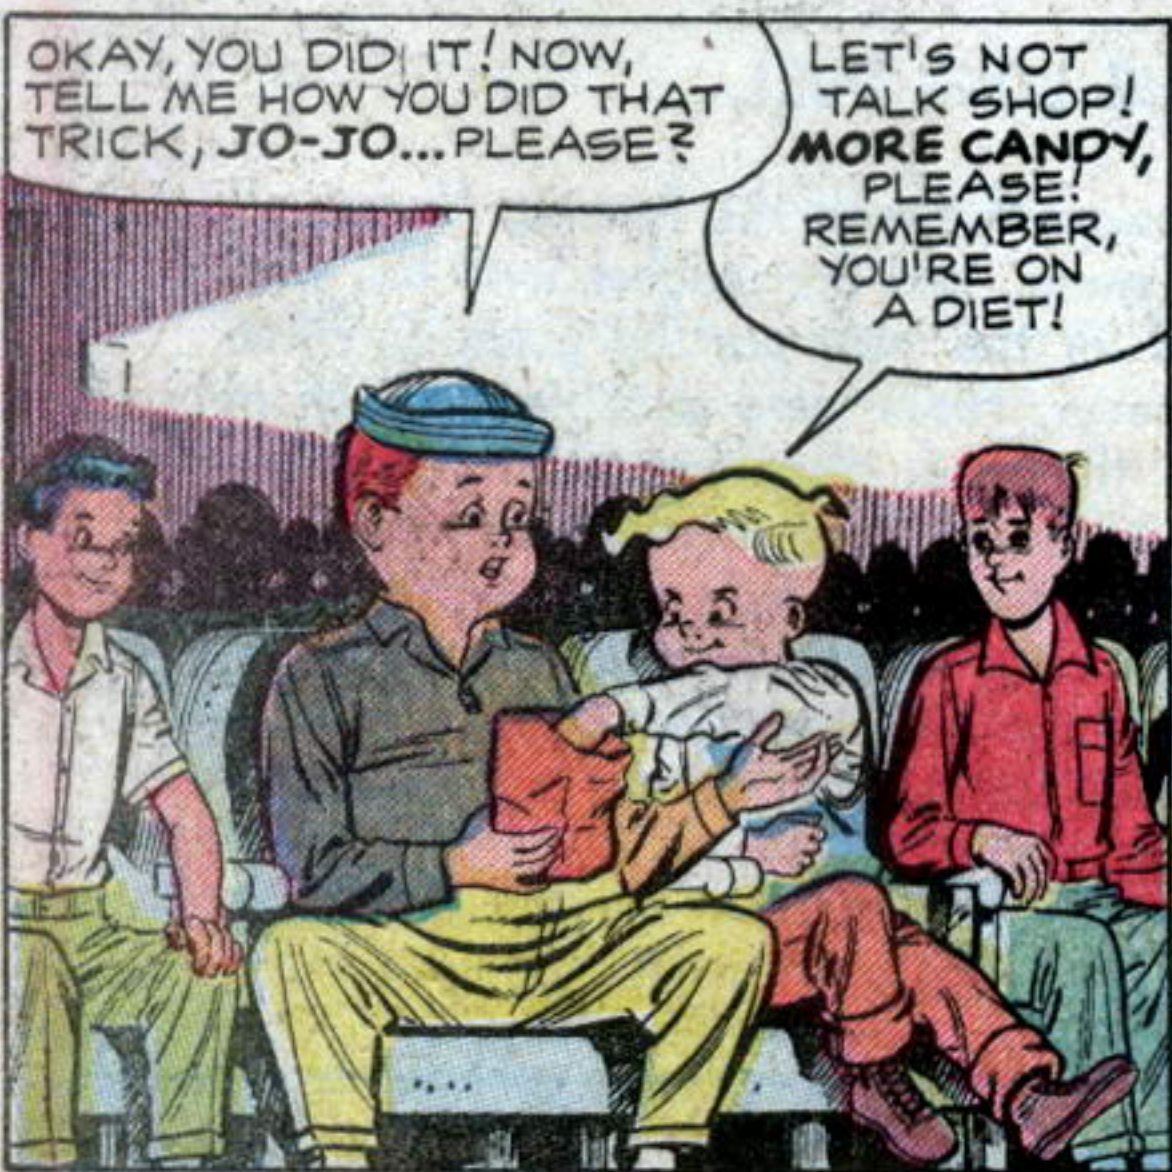

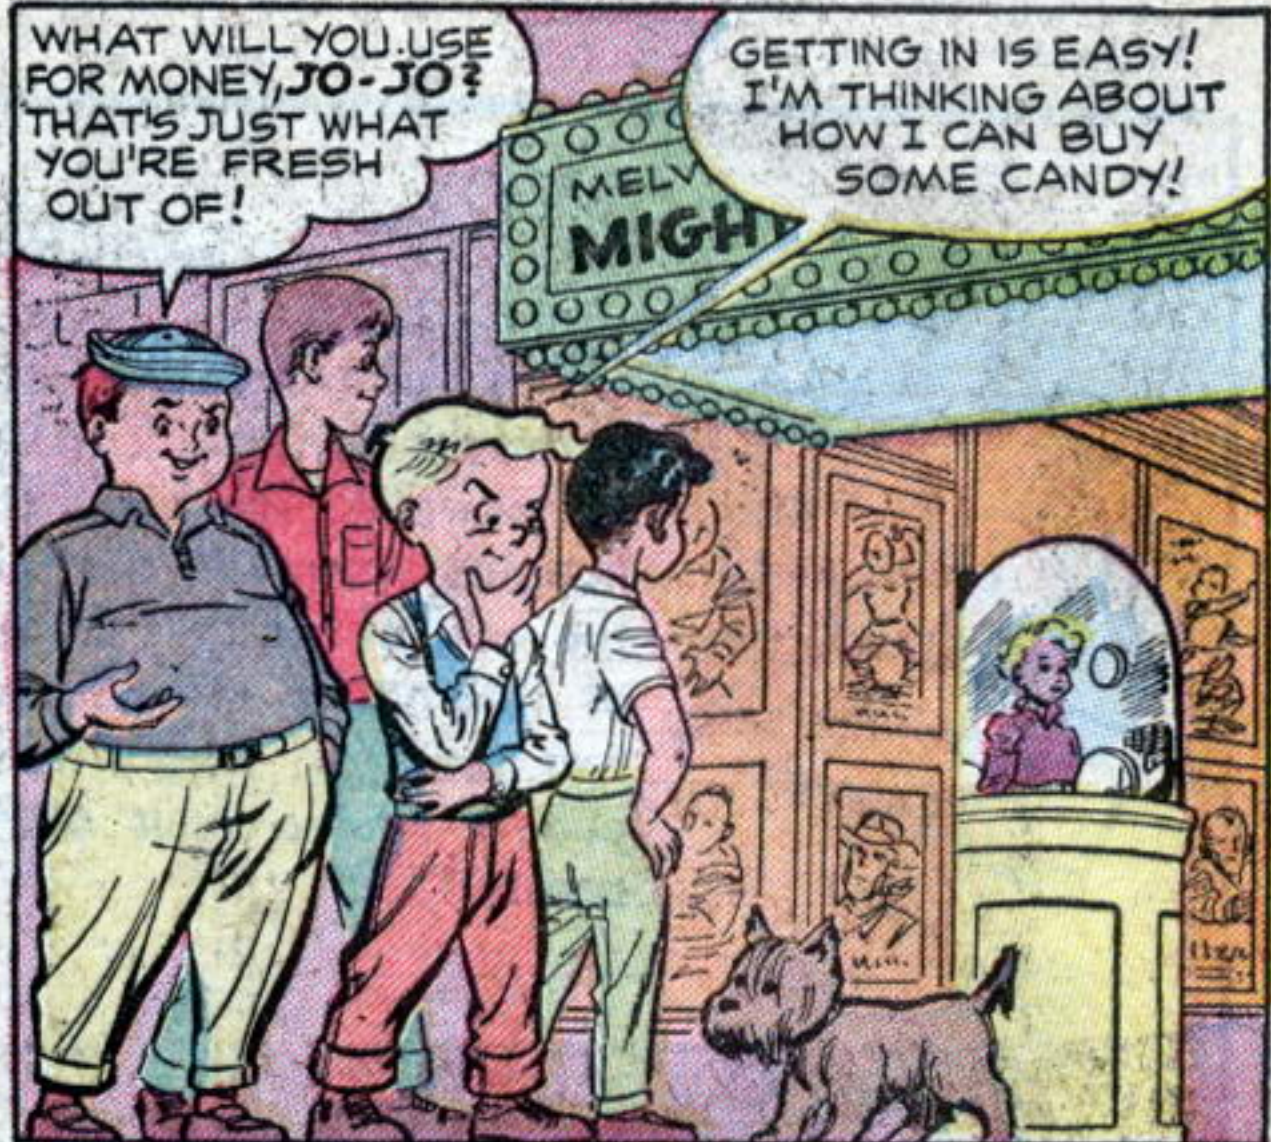

For many years arguments between the farming "nester," with his barbed-wire fences, and the rancher with his wire clippers, were settled for the most part by guns. In Pima County, in 1884, however, there were cool heads both in the saddle and behind the plow. Whenever tension reached the point where something had to give, ranchers and nesters met on Twin Point Plateau and held a tug-of-war, equal number of men on each side. Whichever side succeeded in dragging the other over the line was declared the winner and given free rein for the season to put up fences or pull them down, as they pleased.
